Lean, Mean Restaurant Cuisine - for health professionals

With one quarter of all meals eaten out, we can no longer tell our patients to avoid restaurants - or to just eat the grilled chicken. Dr. Jo, author of Dining Lean, navigates the nutritional backroads from bistro to burger joint during this fun and informative program. She'll share:

- How to manage weight, diabetes, or heart disease at restaurants
- The healthier choices at chain restaurants
- Simple requests (chef-approved to taste great) to make almost any food healthier

How to Enjoy the Ride of Your Life

Whether we like it or not, change has become part of everyone's job description. Our natural tendency is to resist change since it makes us feel fearful, out of control, and emotionally and physically unhealthy. How to Enjoy the Ride of Your Life is not about how to change your organization, it's about how to restructure your thinking so you can look at change as a positive force, not a threat. Learn how to:

- Fly through turbulence without crashing
- Replace self-destructive coping methods with constructive ones
- Brainstorm instead of Blamestorm
- Constructively express your anger and practice the power of persuasion
- Go with the flow and be flexible (while maintaining peace of mind)

Dealing with Difficult Personalities

Remember when Mom said "treat others like we want to be treated?" Well, she was wrong. It's when we treat others all the same and get bad results that we label them "difficult." We will:

- Complete a style survey to uncover which quadrant we and others fall into
- Discover ways to work better with all the "difficult" people in your life
- Realize key words to use - and those not to use - with your difficult people

How to Fix an Attitude

This program isn't about folks with a pleasant, easygoing attitude. We're talking about the person who has a chip on their shoulder. Like a pebble thrown onto a still lake, the ripple effect of their negativity can bring down even the most positive people. Discover how to:

- Handle negative comments and evaluations without reacting
- Deal with the negative people that you have to live with or work with
- Monitor your own attitude so you don't catch the negativity "bug"

Stay Calm, State Your Case, and Be Listened To

Has anyone ever misinterpreted what you said? Can you handle angry people? Do you get the respect you want and deserve? Learn how to:

- Express yourself clearly to minimize misunderstanding & build collaboration with others
- Find the "middle" ground so you don't offend people nor get walked all over
- Set limits with others, give feedback that helps people grow, and respond to criticism

Topic Ideas for the Food Industry

helping busy people stay healthy, sane, and productive

Healthy Eating on the Menu

Americans are currently eating four meals a week in restaurants - and restaurants are under fire to offer healthier options. Dr. Jo, the author of Dining Lean, will navigate the nutritional backroads from bistro to burger joint during this fun and informative program. She'll share:

- The fittest fast food - are they financially successful?
- Why "health" designated on the menu often means disaster
- Simple requests (chef-approved to taste great) that make almost any food healthier
- Who's doing what? - restaurants with healthier options including trans fat free

The Obesity Epidemic and the Food Industry

With two-thirds of all Americans either overweight or obese, there has been much finger pointing (and lawsuits) at the restaurant and snack food industry. Most restaurants and food companies are responding with healthier offerings. But are consumers buying? We'll cover:

- Past and present health-related lawsuits - who are the players?
- Current and pending frivolous lawsuit legislation
- Consumer surveys regarding responsibility - who do consumers blame?
- Consumer attitudes and behavior regarding healthy eating - why do they differ?
- Restaurants and companies that are adapting - how successful are these healthful offerings?

Healthy Trends in the Away-From-Home Market

Does it seem like nutrition experts are always changing their mind about "health"? Which direction should your company be moving in? Learn about:

- Previous diets and their impact in the food and restaurant industry
- What's the next trend?
- How to balance consumer demand, industry pressure, and the bottom line
- How to market nutrition - including consumer's ideas about portion size and value

Mainstreaming of Healthy Options

It's hard to imagine that just 35-40 years ago restaurants didn't offer any healthy options. There were no diet sodas, margarine, grilled chicken sandwiches, or anything other than iceberg salads. People didn't request salad dressing on the side - and there wasn't a diet dressing available. And, back then, certainly no one paid for bottled water. Restaurants really have come a long way. We'll examine the past and then look to the future:

- History of healthy options in restaurants
- What pushed the demand and how successful are they?
- What didn't work and why?
- What healthy products are predicted to go mainstream in the upcoming years?

Topic Ideas for Dietetic Professionals

helping busy people stay healthy, sane, and productive

How to Make More Dough in Dietetics

According to Dr. Jo's online salary satisfaction survey (June-July 2006) of 552 RDs employed in dietetics, 52% were either "unsatisfied or very unsatisfied" with their current financial compensation and 40% agreed with the statement, "I've seriously thought about switching careers so I can make the money I need." But, there's no need to change fields in order to make more dough! From her survey of nearly 100 "financially successful dietitians" (those earning in the top 10% according to ADA's compensation survey), Dr. Jo will share:

- What traits high earners have in common - and how you can develop these strengths
- What classes dietetic students should take to prepare themselves for the higher paid positions
- How to negotiate your next raise or salary - step-by-step!
- Other valuable advice from big-time earners to help you reach your earning potential

How to Sell Yourself & Your Ideas

Everyday someone else is encroaching on our territory. If you don't learn how to "sell" yourself and your ideas to your clients, employees, administration, prospects, and to the media, these unqualified "salespeople" will succeed at your expense. Find out how to:

- Get comfortable with the idea of "selling"
- Motivate others to remember you and what you do
- Persuade others to listen and respond to your ideas

How to Get FREE Publicity

Want more business? Don't waste your money on advertising! Instead, get it for FREE! Find out how to get quoted in newspapers & magazines and interviewed on radio & TV. After this program you'll be able to:

- Explain why some people get publicity and others don't
- Write a press release that gets results
- Describe what to do (and not to do) when the press and media calls

Entrepreneurial Opportunities in Publishing & Media

Everyday there's a self-proclaimed nutrition expert on the radio or TV giving advice. Yet, you are the real nutrition expert. How can you get the media to take notice? Find out how to:

- Publish a book for notoriety and residual income
- Determine whether traditional or self-publishing is the way to go
- Write a killer press release
- Contact the media with your ideas – and get them excited!
- Write great sound bytes so they'll want you back
- How to effectively use the interview to get paid jobs
- Handle difficult questions which get you off track

Praise for Dr Jo's Programs

helping busy people stay healthy, sane, and productive

"Joanne is consistently well-prepared, highly informative, interesting, and humorous. Employees frequently call and request repeat performances. Joanne is highly regarded."

- Mary Beth McGowan, MS, RN, HealthPaq, COMPAQ (now HP)

"I think Joanne was absolutely DYNAMIC. As a trainer it was very refreshing to see this presentation done SO WELL. She was interesting, organized, stayed on target, fun... Great mixture of humor, and great examples that kept us ALL enthralled."

- Adele (Didi) Reynolds, Trainer Int'l, LLBean

"Thank you for joining us - your presentation was well received and you were a pleasure to work with."

- Gloria Williams, Vendor Coordinator
American Food Stamp Directors

"Thank you! All the evaluations reflect superior ratings, but more importantly, the participant's comments include words such as 'transforming' and 'renewed hope.' You gave these people the chance to feel and live those words."

- Judy Gerner, Director, The Anderson Network, MD Anderson Cancer Center

"Your practical advice, real-life examples, anecdotes, and humor helped us to develop our own personal strategies for managing stress. One of the participants said, "this is the most practical stress management course I've ever taken."

- Amy Serritella, AT&T, Chicago

"You know how to provide a comfortable learning environment. Your exercises and group interaction really got them thinking about innovative win-win solutions for their own particular conflicts."

-Lauren Kirby, Director Corporate Training, Univ. Houston

"Chicago Title appreciated the fun and uplifting "Stress Solutions" program you presented to our employees. You are a true professional! We all walked away with practical advice that will help us to manage our job-related stress."

-Mary Ellen Snell, Corporate Marketing Director, Chicago Title

"It has been a pleasure working with you over the last four years and your upbeat and professional demeanor is always appreciated. In each of the programs you presented, the attendees have been offered practical advice... Especially helpful is the way you enable the participants to discover their own role in any situation - so, instead of reacting, they can focus on a healthy, proactive response."

-Annette McMahan, NE Training Logistics Manager, Marriott Int'l

helping busy people stay healthy, sane, and productive

Dining Lean, 3rd ed. (how to eat healthy when you're not at home)

"Dining Lean to the rescue. Although restaurant 'calorie counting' books have been around for a long time, that's not what this book is about. Dr. Jo's book takes a more useful, more intelligent, and more insightful approach. ...provides the basics about restaurant food including ethnic cuisine, lots of rules-of-thumb about how to estimate sizes and calories, and what (and how) to order so you have the great meal you want but not all the calories. ...fun to read, well organized, and graphically clever."

- Brian Wanski, Ph.D.

Author of Mindless Eating: Why We Eat More Than We Think

6" X 9", $19.95 trade paperback, ©2007 (3rd ed.), 300 pgs

Includes full nutritional information: Calories, Fat, Saturated Fat, Trans Fat, Cholesterol, Sodium, Carbohydrates, and Fiber for 1000s of generic menu items found at restaurants, bars, amusement parks, movie theatres...plus more than 5000 menu items at nearly 70 of the largest chain restaurants.

Dr. Jo's Eat Out & Lose Weight Plan

"...Dr. Jo's Eat Out & Lose Weight Plan cards are just so clever!" - Dr. Felicia D. Stoler, DCN, MS, RD, FACSM (Host of TLC's show "Honey We're Killing the Kids")

"... practical, handy solution to the common question of 'what can I eat that's healthy and reasonable in calories when I'm dining out?'" - Leslie Gaillard, MPH RD LDN (Duke Diet & Fitness Center)

Quick tips, strategies, and menu suggestions to making eating out healthy easy. Suggested meals listed in 300-400, 500-600, and 700-800 calorie ranges (noting calorie, fat and fiber). Packaged in a resealable poly bag. Makes an ideal gift for friends, family, and clients.
